

Hi All, there is a movie that (hopefully) will open in theaters mid June 2013. Its called "Return to Zero." It is the first Hollywood movie to deal with the topic of stillbirth. I learned about the movie from reading an on-line magazine called Still Standing--dealing with pregnancy loss and infertility. <http://stillstandingmag.com/> It has become apparent that the movie is not being well received due to the topic, so the makers are asking for individuals to pledge to see the movie so that they can arrange openings in major theatres opposed to the movie going directly to DVD or opening only to limited venues (my assumption). FYI--No one I asking for money, I have signed up to be a local leader, I have not received any emails asking for money, etc. I have been asked to get 100 people in my area to see the movie--there is nothing tied to doing so, I am not receiving anything. Below is a link with info about the movie, and a form to pledge to see the movie. Please review and let me know if you have any questions.

ALSO: there is a documentary call "the still project" about pregnancy and infant loss--I thought you may also be interested in. <http://stillproject.org/>
